Mass of Remembrance Sunday, November 5th

Our Mass of Remembrance will be celebrated at the 9:00 am Mass on Sunday, November 5th.

At this Mass we honor in a special way all those who have been buried from Holy Redeemer in the past year. This Mass will also be livestreamed on our YouTube channel.

PASTOR'S CORNER

All Souls' Day

There are few more "catholic" feasts than the Feast of All Souls. Everyone is included. This week I'd like to remember four souls who had a deep impact on my life, four individuals whose deaths deeply touched me. All of them were untimely. All of them were sad. But all of them brought me closer to the Lord. Don't worry: I purposely picked individuals NOT from our parish.

Kurt. Kurt's story is difficult and problematic. Kurt was a parishioner of mine from the mid 1990's. One night, Kurt and some of his friends were, as young people are wont to do, messing around after midnight. ("Nothing good ever happens after midnight," I ominously always told my students.) The precise nature of their actions is not important, all that is important is that (and this is safe to say) he was doing things he should not have been doing and he was in places where he should not have been. The story gets a bit muddled here, but the outcome isn't. Kurt, running away from getting caught, leapt off a railroad viaduct. The force of the impact when he landed killed him instantly. The one thing I remember the most about Kurt's wake was the intense anger of many of his friends. "How could he have been so stupid?" "Why did he do this?" Their anger was understandable. It was a stupid act. However, Kurt's death taught me two infinitely valuable lessons. First, if I am honest, I did stupid things as well. I was no different than Kurt. I have done reckless things. I was in places and situations where I should not have been. The difference? I got away with it. Kurt didn't. That understanding helped me deal with Kurt's senseless death. Second, I learned that we should be careful not judge the totality of someone's life by one singular act. Kurt was more than his mistake. Kurt was more than that fatal jump. Kurt was more.

Mark. Mark was the brother of one of my friends. Because I was a friend of his sister, I was Mark's friend as well. Mark always was kind and genial to me. However, there was much that I did not know about Mark. For instance, I did not know that he was gay and it was only after he died that I learned about his awful grief over the death of his friend and partner. His friend died of AIDS and his death was ugly and difficult, a long and torturous process. Ironically, it was also a process of spiritual regeneration, because before he succumbed to that terrible scourge, the friend had decided to convert to Catholicism and be received into the church. Sadly, about two weeks after his companion's death, Mark took an overdose of sleeping pills. Mark's family, whom I love very deeply, was devastated. They asked me to do his burial service and I did so gladly. Later, Mark's mother told me how comforting it was for me, as a friend and a representative of the church to be there. Knowing Mark and knowing his story, changed me. The bottom line is surprisingly simple: the church needs to be there for her children, no matter what. Right now we as a church we are struggling with this issue. Some may be horrified that the subject is even brought up. Some are heartened that we are finally reaching out to a community that has felt long shunned and ignored. Working through this issue, I will always recall praying at Mark's graveside and realizing that it was exactly where I needed to be, for Mark, for his family, and for myself.

Jane. Calls in the middle of the night are rarely happy, and the call I received early one August morning from Jane's family was no exception. Jane was the mother of three of my former students. They called me at 12:30 am to say that their mother had been in a car accident, she was airlifted to a hospital's intensive care unit, and could I come and give her last rites. So I drove from Washington into St. Louis at one o'clock in the morning to be with the family for a long and painful vigil. Without getting into all of the details of what happened, I will tell you that indeed, it was an accident, but it was a preventable accident. Alcohol was involved. It was an accident that the family may have been dreading might happen for a long time. Around four in the morning, after sitting for a few hours, the word came: Jane had passed away. These moments are brutal. The family is exhausted. I'm exhausted. And the longer you are there, your mind begins to wander. How will I operate at school with only two hours of sleep? Selfish, I know, but you think those things. But years later, I was profoundly glad that the family had trusted me to come. As with Mark's story, it was important for me to be there. It was important for me to share in their grief.

Dakota. The only murder victim whose burial service I ever officiated was Dakota's. He was two years old. (You read that right, it is not a typo.) And that sad fact only scratches the surface of the chaos surrounding that poor child's tragic death. Dakota was killed by his mother's boyfriend. (His mother was a former student of mine, whose life went a bit off the rails.) Dakota's biological father, I was reassured by the funeral director before the wake, was not in the picture, so I would not have to deal with that brokenness. Or so I thought. The instant I walked into the funeral home, I heard the unmistakable blood-curdling wailing of a young man, Dakota's grieving father. Dakota's funeral service became exponentially more complicated than I had figured. There are moments when you just have to lift things up to the grace of God and trust, and that is exactly what I did that sad day. It was nerve-wracking and terrifying, no doubt, but we entrusted the soul of that poor child to Christ that day. And that memory is forever etched on my soul.

Kurt. Mark. Jane. Dakota.

Eternal rest grant unto them O Lord. And let perpetual light shine upon them.

Father Kevin

Join a Small Church Community!

You are invited to continue creating small church communities (SCCs) at Holy Redeemer within our larger community. We began forming SCCs in January 2015 and several groups are still active. This invitation is open to every parishioner, no matter your age or current involvement in the parish.

Through reading and reflecting on Sunday scriptures, Small church communities help ordinary people connect life and faith. SCCs are groups of 8-12 parishioners who meet weekly. The groups develop a sense of community among the participants as we learn about each other and our life journeys.

Groups will be organized based on dates and times convenient to the participants. The meetings will last for about an hour and a half and be held in parishioners' homes. Please consider this opportunity to deepen your faith by participating in a SCC. No experience or preparation necessary – just come as you are!

If interested, or for more information contact Jerry Lawler; 314 580-1558 or jerry.lawler@gmail.com.
